WEDDINGS.

proper sheath effect, the square neck filled with cloth of gold covered with yellow tulle. They were all made with very long, slender trains and the slightly wafted effects in the backs of the high waisted lines.

Their hats were large flat ones, with graceful droops made of cloth of gold, a single band of dark, rich sable about the low crown, and a large, soft rose of golden yellow upon one side. Instead of the bridesmaids' bouquets, they carried large muffs of yellow chiffon, with a large rose upon each muff. They each formed a quaint picture, bewitching to look at.

On the conclusion of the ceremony the bride party stood on the lowest tier of the platform to receive the guests. Senator and Mrs. Hemenway and their young schoolgirl daughter were the first to be greeted. Mrs. Hemenway wore a gown of soft pale-gray satin trimmed with pearls and steel passementerie, and little Miss Hemenway was in white lace trimmed with satin and ruffles. The greetings for the bride were very happy ones, as she has made a host of friends in Washington, where she has acted as hostess for her father since her graduation from a fashionable school in this city. Her mother's health and motherly duties to a large family have kept her the greater part of the time in her Indiana home. She has discharged these duties with rare tact and grace.

The Vice President and Mrs. Fairbanks were the first to greet the bride after her parents and the bridesmaids, and they were quickly followed by the Speaker of the House of Representatives and Miss Cannon. Then followed a long line of distinguished guests, members of the Cabinet, justices of the Supreme Court, and Senators and Members of Congress and their wives, who have been associated with Senator and Miss Hemenway for some years.

The Senate of the United States did not open its session yesterday until 1:20 o'clock, to admit of its members attending the wedding. The Speaker of the House of Representatives put his gavel into the hands of Representative Dalzell, who called the House to order, so that the Speaker could also be present.

The wedding breakfast was served in the large ballroom adjoining the small one, where the guests made merry for some time afterward, while a delightful programme of music was given by Schroeder's Orchestra, and several songs were sung by Mr. Roberto Dusi, barytone, a relative of the famous Italian singer of that name, and Mr. James A. Flynn, tenor, both of whom were warmly applauded several times. Mr. Dusi made a positive hit with a remarkably good voice of resonance, power, and timbre.

The bride party and the members of the families of the bride and bridegroom lunched together in a small room, after which the bride and bridegroom left for a trip South, before taking possession of their home, 1319 North Meridian street, in Indianapolis. The bride wore a going-away gown of amethyst broadcloth, with a long silk coat to match, and a hat of corded silk trimmed with mink, with which she wore mink furs.

Among the out-of-town guests were Mrs. Lee, of Minneapolis, sister of the bridegroom; Mr. J. B. Gates, of Indianapolis, father of the bridegroom; Mr. and Mrs. A. T. H. of Louisville, Ky., aunt and uncle of the bride; Mr. and Mrs. George Bishop, of Cleveland; Miss Curtin, of Philadelphia; Miss Helen McMillen, of Philadelphia; Miss Bedford, of Brooklyn; and Miss Anthea Cheeser, of Louisville. Among the other guests were the Vice President and Mrs. Fairbanks, the Italian Ambassador and Baroness des Planches; the Secretary of the Interior and Mrs. Garfield; the Secretary of War and Mrs. Wright; Mr. Justice and Mrs. White; the Speaker and Miss Cannon; the Minister from Bolivia and Miss Calderon; the charge d'affaires of Mexico and Mrs. Godoy; and Miss Godoy, of Louisville, Ky., Senator and Mrs. Doliver; Mrs. Forsaker, Senator and Mrs. Heyburn; Senator and Mrs. Carter; Senator and Mrs. Long; Senator and Mrs. Curtis; Mr. J. B. Fraker; Senator and Mrs. Gamble; Gen. and Mrs. John W. Foster; Representative and Mrs. Charles B. Landis; Representative and Mrs. Dixon; Representative and Mrs. Chancy; Representative and Mrs. Crumpacker; the Second Auditor and Mrs. Benjamin F. Harper; Mr. and Mrs. Lawrie; Mrs. Lee Phillips; Miss Padelford; Mrs. Bell, wife of Gen. Bell; Mrs. J. B. Henderson; Mrs. Pilon; Miss Pilon; Senator and Mrs. Kean; Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Halford; Mrs. Hildred; Mrs. Warren Fairbanks, daughter-in-law of the Vice President; Mrs. Timmons, daughter of the Vice President; Mr. Hopkins, Senator and Mrs. Hopkins; Col. and Mrs. Archibald Gage.
